

How to Find Freelance Work

Starting a Lucrative Work-at-Home Career

Right now, you are looking head on into such a fantastic window of opportunity that I feel almost jealous. This is a great time to be starting a freelance career, no matter how little previous experience you have. The world really is your oyster right now.

Why? Because in recent times, the world has changed, and changed a great deal. As a result, it is now genuinely possible for you to earn a living in ways you may never have dreamed of before.

And it's all thanks to the Internet....

Heck, when I started freelancing, finding work was much tougher. It was a case of using traditional methods such as direct mail, cold calling, networking...all hard work.

But the advent of the Internet has changed our lives in many ways, including the way we work and make money. Fed up of slogging through commuter traffic, day after day? Well, the great news is that you don't have to. Nowadays, you really can build a successful home-based career as a freelance professional – using the Internet to find and communicate with clients.

The Freelance Opportunity

Online freelancing has truly blossomed in recent years. In the early days of the Internet, many people were wary of doing business with people they couldn't meet face to face. But all that has changed. The Internet is now a part of our everyday lives, and we are used to working with people we may never see in person.

For freelancers, this literally means a world of opportunity. You can work from home, doing interesting and rewarding work, working with customers all over the world. You can be paid directly into your bank account, and earn more than you ever dreamed possible in your 9-5 day job.

So Who Can Freelance?

The simple answer to that question is – almost anyone!

We all have skills and expertise in one area or another, and you can market those skills on a freelance basis. Even if you think you have no specialist skills, you can always do admin and support jobs, which can often pay surprisingly well. From writing and design, to programming and consulting, there are a huge range of opportunities in the freelance world.

How Much Can You Earn?

Again, that is pretty much up to you. A great many freelancers routinely earn six-figures or more. That's a goal that is most certainly attainable. But if you have greater ambitions, then you should note that some freelancers earn half a million dollars a year, or even more. Top specialists can comfortably command fees that exceed $1,000,000.00 a year – and that's no exaggeration.

Don't believe me? OK, check out this page from the web site of top copywriter Dan Kennedy. See what I mean – his business income exceeds $2,000,000 a year – every year! Not bad for a one-man band...

...and the great news is that there is no reason why you cannot achieve the same level of success.

Admittedly, he is at the top of his field – but if Dan can rake in millions, how easy would it be for you to make a comfortable six figures from freelancing? A piece of cake!
